SUMMER ON SKYLINE DRIVE—Field glasses help when picking out distant points of interest from the Skyline Drive in Virginia's Shenandoah National Park but they aren't necessary for full enjoyment of the Park's scenic splendor or its cool comfort. Skyline Drive, a 107 mile highway in the sky, runs along the Blue Ridge Mountain top between Front Royal and Rockfish Gap, near Waynesboro.

FLUE-CURED COUNTIES
INDUSTRY WANTS
RIPE TOBACCO

It pays to harvest ripe tobacco. G. R. Mathews, associate agronomist at VPI, says that ripe or mature tobacco is what industry wants. It sells higher than immature tobacco, is easier to cure and grade, and moves into trade more readily.

Furthermore, if you harvest only ripe tobacco and have less "slick" tobacco, less green tobacco, and fewer "blue butts."

When priming tobacco watch for leaf characteristics in the field. Ripe leaves have lost some of their green color and have taken on a yellow cast. They have begun to "grain-up" and often show a light specking. They are somewhat less gummy.

Immature leaves, on the other hand, are green in color, are gummy and sticky, and the base of the leaf is still green although there may be a slight burn at the tip. Avoid using condition on tip as the only indication of ripeness.

Certain varieties like Virginia Gold and Dixie Bright 101 grow with a yellow cast. Be sure to remember this when you are using color as an indication of ripeness. Often Virginia Gold and 101 should be allowed to burn slightly at the tip before harvesting.

Generally you can't wait for the bottom leaves to get thoroughly ripe because they are thin and will burn readily. Although you harvest these leaves when they are slightly immature, they will generally carry a good color when cured and there will be fewer dead and chaffy leaves.

Board Censured For Methods In Teacher Case

Meeting this week in Fredericksburg, the board of directors of the Virginia Education Association unanimously adopted a statement in censure of the action of the Appomattox County School Board for its handling of the failure to reemploy two teachers in the Appomattox High School.

The V. E. A. board stated that the teachers apparently were "not reoffered contracts because of inefficiency."

Dr. Robert F. Williams, V. E. A. executive secretary, said there was "a lot of discussion" but "not much argument" during the review of the case.

The board's statement said that "although no reasons were given by the Appomattox School Board for its action, it seems that the teachers involved were not reoffered contracts because of inefficiency.

"While we recognize that Virginia school boards have no legal responsibility for giving reasons for failure to reoffer contracts to school personnel, we should like to emphasize strongly the fact that it is generally the custom for reasons to be given and that failure to do so results inevitably in lowered teacher morale.

"We point out that in the world of business and industry, even in cases of unskilled workmen, reasons are usually given for the termination of employment and opportunities are usually provided for hearings.

"In view of the nationwide and statewide efforts to recruit and retain competent teachers and to raise the status of teaching as a profession, we strongly urge school boards to adopt reasonable and dignified employment practices. A recent national surveys show that working conditions and employment practices have a direct relationship to the current teacher shortage."

Sorting market hogs in the heat of the day is a poor way to start them on the way to market, warn VPI animal husbandmen. It's far better to sort them out early or late in the day, or at night. Start them on their way cool and rested and they'll be in better selling condition when they reach market.

Egg producers should watch carefully for broody hens, advise poultry specialists at VPI. As soon as a hen goes broody put her in a separate coop. A broody hen will sit on a nest of eggs all day and keep them warm. This will cause egg quality to drop in a hurry.

JUMP SAVES LIVES

Chicago.- Five men were terrified when a high-tension wire snapped during a heavy thunder storm and fell across their convertible, turning it into a potential electric chair. The canvas top of the car caught fire but William Carnahan, 23, of Waucona, Ill., the driver, pressed a button that caused it to roll down. Then the tires started burning and the car paint started blistering as the men sat there. Finally, they stood on the seats and jumped to the ground without touching the car's metal sides, thus saving their lives.

Visitor attendance has been excellent this season at the Appomattox National Historical Park area. Figures for the month of July show that there were 5,105 paid admissions that month at the McLean House. This is for adults, as there is no charge for children. Estimates are that there were 10,500 visitors in the Old Court House area during the month of July.

Ralph Happel, Park Service historian, of Fredericksburg, arrived here yesterday, being detailed to Appomattox to do some special research work in connection with further restoration projects. He will be remembered here for his previous research at the Park in years past.

Also at the Old Court House has been J. C. Harrington, archeologist for the Park Service, to aid in the research now being made preparatory to several restoration programs in the historic village.

A sizeble allocation of funds is available for use here during the fiscal year which began on July 1. Most of it will be expended on the Hix Tavern, the Tavern Guest House, the Meeks-Plunket House, and companion outbuildings in the heart of the court house group of buildings. Work thus far has featured excavations and preparation of architects drawings from findings of the archeologists. Historic foundations have been revealed and exact details ascertained for the restoration.

It is pleasing to local citizens to hear that attendance of visitors has steadily increased, for this condition is indicative of a sustained interest on the part of people in all parts of the United States in preserving the shrine of peace at the locale of the ending of the War Between the States April 9, 1865.

Virginians Eye Convention and Special Session

Attention in Virginia this week was divided between the Democratic National Convention, set to begin Monday in Chicago, and the forthcoming special session of the General Assembly scheduled for August 27. In conneition with the latter, it was announced that two vanancies in the General Assembly will not be filled prior to the special session. State Senator Frank P. Burton, of Stuart, died recently, and Delegate H. Clyde Pearson resigned as representative of Lee County in the House. Governor Stanley has indicated, through his press secretary, that no special election will be called to fill the two vacancies prior to August 27.

Meanwhile, there was a vast area of conjecture as to what the special session may be asked to enact into law in the effort of Southern states to maintain segregation, with equal opportunity, in its public schools. Some of the proposals assumed emergency status as Federal judges set deadlines for mixing of White and Negro pupils.

However, a variety of proposals are being discussed, and a close tab is being kept on action of other Southern states, faced with the same problem.
